Even as on-line courses in education proliferate, concerns about the effectiveness of the on-line teaching and learning environment remain. Can an on-line course (or program) have the same quality and impact as a course delivered in a traditional classroom? The ASA book Liberal Learning and the Sociology Major Updated states that a successful sociology program should promote study in depth within the discipline. Study in depth is defined as “the development of a coherent and mature conception of sociology as a scholarly endeavor that involves the interplay of empirical and theoretical analysis... (2005:2). The book includes sixteen specific recommendations for how departments can achieve study in depth in sociology. In this session, a panel of faculty with experience in on-line education will consider the strengths and weaknesses of the on-line teaching and learning environment for promoting study in depth in sociology in general, and for achieving the 16 recommendations of “Liberal Learning and the Sociology Major Updated” in particular.

organizer & presider: Sharon K. Araji, Univ. of Colorado Denver
Ross Koppel, Univ. of Pennsylvania (Winner of the 2010 ASA Distinguished Career Award for the Practice of Sociology)

Dr. Koppel is a Professor in the Sociology Department at the University of Pennsylvania; is Principal Investigator, Center for Clinical Epidemiology and Biostatistics, School of Medicine, University of Pennsylvania; serves as Chair, AMLA Evaluation Working Group; Faculty, The Rand Corporation; serves as Evaluator, Harvard Medical School project to restructure HIT architecture; and serves as President, Social Research Corporation.

Professor Koppel's work in medical informatics reflects his 40 year career as researcher and professor of sociology of work and organizations, statistics, ethnographic research, survey research, and medical sociology. He is the principal investigator of Penn's study on hospital workplace culture and medication errors. In the past 4 years Dr. Koppel has published over 25 articles and book chapters on HIT in JAMA, Health Affairs, JAMLA, Journal of Biomedical Informatics, Journal of Clinical Care, Journal of the American Geriatrics Society, Journal of Managed Care, AHRQ-M&M, and Infection Control and Hospital Epidemiology plus two books (one on research methods (Sage Publications) and one in press). Koppel is also the author of several works on evaluation and use of statistical methods in medical settings.

His work generally combines sophisticated statistical analyses with survey research and skilled ethnographic research—focusing on use of HIT in situ. Prof. Koppel is currently Co-PI of an AHRQ-funded project to develop a guide to implementing HIT while mitigating unintended consequences. That guide is based on new models of interactions between technology and organizations, which Koppel co-authored with Michael Harrison. In addition to his work in medical informatics, Koppel has authored over 160 academic papers and articles, several monographs, and several books and book chapters. Many of those works addressed the interaction between technology and the workplace, training for use of technology, hospitals as workplaces, illness and society, and the cost of disease and caregiving to the U. S. economy.

Dr. Koppel is the recipient of the Distinguished Career Award in the Practice of Sociology from the American Sociological Association (ASA). He has also been honored with the William Foote Whyte Award from the ASA's section on Public Sociology, the Robert E. Park Award from the Association for Applied and Clinical Sociology, the Distinguished Career Award from the Society for Applied Sociology, and several other awards for his work in Sociological scholarship and practice. He has served as president of all of America's associations of applied sociologists. Koppel also: is the incoming chair of AMLA's Evaluation Working Group; sits on several academic journal editorial boards, serves on the Board of the European Sociology Association's Section on Qualitative Methods; has twice served on the White House Conference on Future of Small Business & Entrepreneurship; was president of the section on Temporal Ecology of the Research Committee on Social Ecology of the International Sociological Association; and has served as an evaluator for the National Science Foundation, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality.

Dept Chairs Breakfast Workshop with Margaret Vitullo, Director, Academic & Professional Affairs Program of the American Sociological Association: "Responding to Departmental Challenges: Sharing Effective Practices"

Department Chairs are invited to come to the ASA Chairs Breakfast. After a brief presentation on key issues in higher education that are presenting challenges for department chairs, participants will have an opportunity to select a round table topic that is of current concern in their department. Topics may include: student recruitment, curriculum and assessment, handling budgets during difficult times, and negotiating conflict in the department. Come hear how other department chairs are handling departmental challenges and share your own ideas for effective responses. In addition, learn about ways the ASA can help. Please RSVP to mvitullo@asanet.org. Participants are encouraged to come early so they can have breakfast in hand when the session starts.

103) PRESIDENTIAL SESSION: Workshop in Identity Theory

organizer: Sharon Araj, Univ. of Colorado Denver

Jan Stets & Peter Burke, UC Riverside

Workshop participants will have the opportunity to work through the basic ideas of identity theory including the verification process, the hierarchical control system, multiple identities, and identity change. We also will cover the basics of the measurement of meaning for person, role, and group identity standards and reflected appraisals, the measurement of identity discrepancies, the measurement of outcomes such as emotion and self-esteem, and the measurement of identity salience, commitment, and prominence. Additionally, we will provide some thoughts and suggestions for statistical models and procedures to test hypotheses about verification and maintenance with its emotional and behavioral consequences as well as identity change. Finally, we will discuss avenues for future research where researchers can be making a contribution to extend the theory.

Cost: $10.00 to offset costs and materials [Participants will pay the Workshop Leaders directly and should contact Jan Stets (jan.stets@ucr.edu) regarding payment].

198) VIDEO SESSION: Modern Day Slavery: Visually Telling the Story

organizers & presiders: Marcia Marx & Patricia Little, CSU San Bernardino

Most Americans think that slavery is a thing of the past, but for many immigrants and non-documented workers the reality of human labor exploitation has taken new forms. This session will highlight through video the exploitive conditions that workers face in order to fulfill the needs for low wage labor in the U.S. economy. The struggle of workers to fightback against their oppressors is also highlighted through media as resistance meets exploitation in the tomato fields of Immokalee and elsewhere. This session will show how visually depicting the experiences of individuals makes topics such as race, ethnicity and gender, social class, work, capitalism, and globalization to name a few more meaningful to students as we are teaching about them.

203) VIDEO SESSION: “Killing Us Softly 4: Advertising’s Image of Women”

Presider: Sally Raskoff, LA Valley College

[This is a film screening of the new, highly anticipated update of Jean Kilbourne’s pioneering “Killing Us Softly” series. This film marshals a range of new print and television advertisements to lay bare a stunning pattern of damaging gender stereotypes – images and messages that too often reinforce unrealistic, and unhealthy, perceptions of beauty, perfection, and sexuality. Killing Us Softly 4 stands to challenge the new and current generation to take advertising seriously, and to think critically about popular culture and its relationship to sexism, eating disorders, and gender violence. This film is a follow-up to last year’s film screening, The Codes of Gender, at the 2010 PSA Meeting in Oakland.]

204) VIDEO SESSION: “Mean World Syndrome: Media Violence and the Cultivation of Fear”

organizer & presider: Karen Sternheimer, USC

[This is a screening of the new film, “The Mean World Syndrome” from the late George Gerbner’s groundbreaking analysis of media influence and media violence. For years, debates have raged among scholars, politicians, and concerned parents about the effects of media violence on viewers. Too often these debates have descended into simplistic battles between those who claim that media messages directly cause violence and those who argue that activists exaggerate the impact of media exposure altogether. “The Mean World Syndrome”, based on the groundbreaking work of media scholar George Gerbner, urges us to think about media effects in more nuanced ways. Ranging from Hollywood movies and prime-time dramas to reality programming and the local news, the film examines how media violence forms a pervasive cultural environment that cultivates in heavy viewers, especially, a heightened state of insecurity, exaggerated perceptions of risk and danger, and a fear-driven propensity for hard-line political solutions to social problems. A provocative and accessible introduction to cultivation analysis, media effects research, and the subject of media influence and media violence more generally.]

205) SPECIAL VIDEO SESSION: Can Art Stop a War? The Power of Posters to Educate, Agitate & Inspire

organizer: Jane Emery Prather (Past PSA President), CSU Northridge

discussant: Dennis Loo, Cal Poly Pomona

presenter: Carols Wells, Executive Director, Center for the Study of Political Graphics

[From the Russian Revolution to the ongoing wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, posters have been central to winning the hearts and minds of the people who pay the costs of war with their lives and their tax dollars. This video presentation shows how art has been used to promote and oppose wars throughout the 20th and 21st centuries, focusing on posters that oppose diverse U.S. interventions.]

243) PRESIDENTIAL SESSION: Workshop: Getting Your Teaching Resources Published in TRAILS

organizer: Sharon K. Araji, Univ. of Colorado Denver presenter: Margaret Vitullo, Director, Academic & Professional Affairs Program of the American Sociological Association.

TRAILS (Teaching Resources and Innovation Library for Sociology) is the first ever interactive, on-line digital library of peer-reviewed teaching materials for sociology. In addition to providing thousands of teaching resources in over 70 subject areas, it also creates an entirely new way for faculty to demonstrate their scholarship of teaching and learning for promotion and tenure committees. The first part of the workshop will include a brief history of the ASA's Teaching Resource Center (TRC) and explain how TRAILS fits into and extends the TRC tradition. Next, participants will be introduced to TRAILS and learn how to navigate the site as a user. The third part of the workshop will include a detailed discussion of the criteria that TRAILS area editors use when evaluating new submissions, and provide a step-by-step demonstration of the TRAILS on-line submission system.
