1. Chairs Pre-Conference Workshop with Margaret Vitullo of the ASA-- Thursday Mar 22 | 7:30 AM-11:45 AM | Bel Aire North

Organizer: Margaret Vitullo, ASA

Chair: Margaret Vitullo, ASA

This workshop has three key goals: to update sociology department chairs on national trends in higher education and sociology that impact their departments; to give participants the opportunity to gather a range of creative solutions to a specific problem in their own department from department chairs in similar institutions; and finally, to help chairs reconnect to the personally satisfying aspects of being a department leader. Prior to coming to the workshop, department chairs are encouraged to create a list of the 3-4 most pressing challenges in their departments, and among those, identify the top issue they wish to address during the workshop. Please send your challenges and issues to Margaret Vitullo (vitullo@asanet.org) by February 15.

21. Sociology and the Arts: Doing and Communicating Sociology through the Arts-- Thursday Mar 22 | 1:45 PM-3:15 PM | Coronado B

Throughout all phases of history, arts have served as a means for communicating details about everyday life from many viewpoints. As such, the arts serve as both a lens into the ideas, values and relations that affect and effect relations between people, social systems and institutions. Uncovering and reporting these things is also one of the primary interests of sociology. This session offers attendees examples of new ways of looking at arts (taken broadly) as a means for doing and communicating sociology.

48. Applied Social Science: Needs Assessments, Interventions & Evaluations (1)-- Friday Mar 23 | 8:30 AM-10:00 AM | Bel Aire South

Applying social science knowledge is often accomplished through active engagement with non-profit organizations, social programs, political initiatives and corporate projects. Two of the most common points of engagement are (a) needs assessments and (b) evaluations. Needs assessment is a process for investigating organizations and their ability to accomplish valued goals, and to provide advice that will help them accomplish those goals. Evaluations operate at the 'other end' of an initiative or program, to determine how a program was or what not effective in meeting its goals. In concert, needs assessments and evaluations are two ways social scientists can introduce 'differences that make a difference' for people and organizations.

91. Ethnographic Research Podcasts in the Corporate Research Environment-- Friday Mar 23 | 10:15 AM-11:45 AM | Coronado A

Organizer: Luke Plurkowski, Palo Alto Research Center

This session will highlight a recent methodology utilized by social scientists at the Palo Alto Research Center to better communicate their ethnographic research findings to other research and non-research audiences: video podcasts. These short form videos are like mini-documentaries, highlighting for the audience the methods used by researchers to explore a time and place, and uncover interesting research findings about the people being studied. In a typical 5-10 minute podcast, the audience can quickly understand how the data was collected, what research methodology was applied, and what insights are created from a qualitative look at people and their work or leisure practices. This session will consist of viewing four different short-form videos, created in support of a variety of ethnographic projects, and each intended for very different audiences. The presenter will briefly overview the project and intended output before each video, and will wrap up the session with Q&A about how to create effective research podcasts. Titles of ethnographic research podcasts presented:

- An Ethnographic Study of Projector Use in Business Settings
- Palo Alto Parking Discovery
- Ordering Cough Syrup: An Ethnography of Healthcare Work
- Small Business Users of Multi-Function Print Devices

122. Applied Social Science: Needs Assessments, Interventions & Evaluations (2)-- Friday Mar 23 | 1:45 PM-3:15 PM | Bel Aire South

Applying social science knowledge is often accomplished through active engagement with non-profit organizations, social programs, political initiatives and corporate projects. Two of the most common points of application are (a) needs assessments and (b) evaluations. Needs assessment is a process for investigating organizations and their ability to accomplish valued goals, and to provide advice that will help them accomplish those goals. Evaluations operate at the 'other end' of an initiative or program, to determine how a program was or what not effective in meeting its goals. In concert, needs assessments and evaluations are two ways social scientists can introduce 'differences that make a difference' for people and organizations.
